What work requires a building consent?

Schedule 1 of the Building Act lists the few types of building work that do not require a building consent. Such works tend to be of a small scale, being within certain dimensional or volume limitations. Building works exempt from building consent requirements must still comply with the New Zealand Code.

Exemption 2 allows a discretionary decision to be made by Wanganui District Council to exempt proposed building work from the requirement to obtain a building consent in circumstances specified.

This clause 2 exemption was given to Shane Stone Builders to install insulation into outside walls of these separate residential addresses in order to speed up the completion of the work from the June flood event.

Normally fitting insulation into exterior walls is Building Consentable work, but given the urgency and the situation of owners after this event it was decided Shane Stone Builders have a good enough track record with us to allow this work to proceed without inspection.

A discussion with them confirms they understand the need for building paper on exterior walls or the retro fitting of such by pocketing building wrap between studs if not included.
